Resigned trustee wins court approval for reappointment – what the RBC Trustees (Guernsey) Limited judgement means for the trusts industry...

Jersey's Royal Court had "no hesitation" in re-appointing a trustee that had resigned its role, after it was left with fiduciary responsibility for trust assets but no authority to act when it was not replaced. The case of RBC Trustees (Guernsey) Limited explores what happens to powers reserved to a settlor when that settlor dies or, in the case of a company, is liquidated. Partner Steve Meiklejohn and associate Matthew Freegard explain.
