Background and experience

David moved to Jersey in 1993, having read Modern Languages at Worcester College, Oxford. With over 25 years' experience in international financial services, David joined Ogier from a leading investor services group, where he held the role of global chief risk officer for six years. A chartered accountant by profession, his experience also includes 11 years' assurance and advisory work with leading accounting firms, as well as 10 years at a leading global bank during which David undertook a range of leadership positions including membership of the bank's global trust advisory board with oversight of fiduciary operations across the Caribbean, British Isles and Asia.

He is also a former technical director at Jersey Finance, where he was responsible for shaping the industry's overall relationship with the JFSC and government.
