

Ogier's new online wills portal makes life even easier

News - 29/01/2019

Ogier has launched a new digital portal to turn the process of making a will into a straight-forward one that can be done at home with the support of Jersey-qualified Advocates available online.

The new service uses a simple online questionnaire to prepare a draft will, which is then reviewed by a Jersey Advocate before a face-to-face meeting for final review and signature.

The process is not just less expensive and quicker – it also runs at clients' own pace and gives them the time and space they need to pull all of the information that they need.

The process also prompts clients to think about funeral wishes and digital legacies (social media accounts and photos, documents and music stored online), which do not always form part of a traditional will.

Head of Estate Planning, Wills and Probate Henry Wickham, said: "Putting together a will doesn't need to be complex or costly, and this new service lets people do the bulk of the decision making in their own time, while giving them the reassurance of having a Jersey Advocate review all of the documents with them when they are ready.

"Making a will is an important thing to do, and Jersey law is very different to the law of England & Wales in this area. Our clients have the reassurance that we have a legal team who are experts in Jersey law on probate and estates who will help them to ensure that their wishes are reflected and will be carried out.

"No-one likes thinking about their own mortality, but this really is a straightforward way of making sure that at a very difficult time, your family will know, very clearly, what you had decided should happen to your assets, and have the comfort of knowing that your wishes are being carried out."
