

Three of Ogier's Cayman trusts team make global elite list

News - 03/08/2018

Three of Ogier's Cayman team have been included in the Private Client Global Elite that recognises the top names in the international private wealth sector.

Partner Rachael Reynolds, who has been a Cayman Attorney for more than ten years, leads the Cayman Dispute Resolution team, has made the main list which whittled down 6,000 entries to just 250 names.

Senior associate Fraser Allister and Cayman-qualified Edwin Gomez from the firm's Hong Kong team were included in the "Ones to Watch" category.

Fraser is a Cayman and BVI-law qualified senior associate in Ogier's Cayman Private Client and Trusts team, while Edwin is a Cayman disputes lawyer specialising in trusts litigation.

Partner Anthony Partridge from Ogier's Cayman Private Client and Trusts team said: "Our Cayman team spans both contentious and non-contentious trusts practitioners, and has built a very strong reputation in the market.

"We have in-depth knowledge of the jurisdiction's law on trusts and foundation companies, enabling us to provide flexible and practical guidance on choosing the most effective structure – added to that we have the capacity to provide a full service offering in respect of disputes and court applications.

"It is very pleasing to see the very strong – and thoroughly deserved – market reputations that Rachael, Fraser and Edwin have built reflected in the Private Client Global Elite list."

The Private Client Global Elite is an independent directory compiled by Legal Week - inclusion on the list is determined by the number of nominations an individual receives from peers, the depth and breadth of their experience and the number and quality of international nominations outside of the entrant's home jurisdiction.
