On 22 September 2022, the ECB announced that it had decided to purchase up to €300 billion of eligible assets in the secondary market, in order to provide additional liquidity to the banking system. The ECB's decision was based on the fact that the ECB's balance sheet had increased significantly since the start of the pandemic, and that the ECB's policy of quantitative easing (QE) had led to a large increase in the amount of government bonds held by the ECB. The ECB's decision to purchase up to €300 billion of eligible assets in the secondary market was a further step in its QE programme, and was intended to provide additional liquidity to the banking system.
