

Covid-19 has dramatically expanded the area of Private Client law over the past 12 months. With clients having time to reflect and focus on their personal affairs, they now have more demands in keeping personal affairs up to date regarding wills, powers of attorney, successional and estate planning.

To meet this demand, practitioners have had to radically rethink the way things are done. This conference is a great way to reconnect with peers and force new connections with the private client intermediary community.
